Reimagining the healthcare experience for all

What if we could reimagine how care is delivered?

We constantly hear how the healthcare system is under pressure or broken. But what if the system itself wasn't broken, and these cracks were symptoms of not giving our hard-working frontline heroes the right tools?

Every day hundreds of millions of people engage with millions of healthcare workers who are doing their absolute very best. But they are doing it with tools that most industries abandoned decades ago.

Think about it, there hasn't been a great deal of digital transformation in how we deliver care. We've got the same waiting rooms, the same routine questions repeated over and over and far too much paperwork. But none of this is about replacing doctors and nurses - it's about saving their time for what they do best.

It is about imagining a future where receiving the care you need on your own terms isn't a pipe dream. It is about imagining a time when clinical staff are unshackled from cumbersome time-consuming systems and having the data they need to do their job better, at their fingertips. It is about reimagining our healthcare systems so that everyone is empowered to be in control of their care, on their terms.

The future of healthcare isn't spending on bricks, mortar, and enormously expensive hospital automation IT projects. The future as we imagine it, will be underpinned by a healthcare system that empowers people, reveals insights from data, and unifies healthcare silos seamlessly, and securely across the ecosystem, improving the efficiency of care and advancing the well-being of everyone.

Imagine if we could completely reimagine the healthcare experience for all

PX – PEOPLE EXPERIENCE

- The healthcare system is difficult to navigate
- Waiting lists and times increasing
- Information is sioled and/or not available
- Reliance on "Dr Google"
- No digital relationship with healthcare providers
- Health systems are focused on illness not wellness

CX – CLINICIAN EXPERIENCE

- Demand for services exceeds supply capability
- Carers are overworked and burnt out
- Information is siloed and/or not available
- Dealing with frustrated patients
- Passion for outcomes they can't deliver
- Reliance on archaic, largely manual processes

DX – DATA EXPERIENCE

- Health information exists in silos or disparate data sets
- Huge volumes of unstructured data
- Constant influx of new types of data such as social determinants of health
- Lack of access to quality data
- Lack of meaningful insights at the point of care
